A POSTER from 1976. Printing workshops were held because the medium helped the women reach a broad audience.

Speaking of books, I understand the Women's Building was many things to many people: along with the Feminist Studio Workshop, the main educational program, it helped run, there were also feminist galleries, bookstores,

The building housed a number of groups: a bookstore, galleries, a cafe, theater groups, and a travel agency that specialized in women's tours. You could see an exhibition of Ione's work, and next door was the women's bookstore. In addition, there was a place where women were coming to find their own voices, however they wanted to express themselves.
