The Printmaking minor offers students the opportunity to further explore their practice in methods of printmaking and to study its impact in history, culture and contemporary art. A balance of traditional and contemporary studio techniques will be covered to engage students’ critical thinking and creative processes. This minor also examines artists and communities working with the multiple in areas of book arts, installation, and communication while exploring the root of printmaking as related to current print and digital methods through research and individual projects.

Eligibility
The Printmaking minor is open to students majoring in Communication Arts, Digital Media, and Fine Arts. Because of their major curricular requirements Architecture/Landscape/Interiors, Fashion Design and Product Design majors will only be approved to enroll on a case-by-case basis.
