The site plan is a 53’ dry van that moves from place to place to provide essential social, and health services for people in need. In short, it’s a pop-up social services center. The leading idea for this project is not to extend horizontally out onto the street to, instead, the truck extends vertically to get the space that’s needed for the program.